The Department of Religion's undergraduate major is built to be as flexible as possible so that students may pursue individual interests and interdisciplinary goals. The major provides students with the opportunity to explore mainline religious traditions and marginal/repressed religious currents within multicultural and transnational contexts. Students will gain religious literacy while studying the historical, social, cultural, psychological, philosophical, and cognitive dynamics of religion and religious experience.

The department also offers an undergraduate minor for students who wish to master a core body of basic knowledge about the study of religion and have the opportunity to get a broad overview of the study of Religion as a field which is outside their major focus of study at Rice.

The department is well-known for its graduate program in the study of Religion which provides students with the opportunity to apprentice with premier faculty and tailor their program of study to their interests. While vibrant coursework in traditional religions is offered, the department is especially known for an emphasis on heterodoxy and multiculturalism. As part of its graduate program, the Religion department offers a Master of Arts and a PhD degree. Additionally, the Certificate in Gnosticism, Esotericism, and Mysticism \(GEM\) is a graduate-level academic credential that the Religion department offers to Rice graduate students in Rice degree-granting programs.

Bachelor's Program

- Bachelor of Arts \(BA\) Degree with a Major in Religion

Often, it's difficult to even understand what we're talking about. Where do these forms of discrimination come from? Are they about race? Religion? Ethnicity? Perhaps something else entirely? In this course, we'll address these questions using a variety of disciplines and by looking at a range of sources, from literature and films to works of philosophy and political theory. We'll turn our attention back to medieval Spain and move all the way through contemporary debates about the Holocaust, the State of Israel, and the War on Terror. By the end, students will have a rich knowledge of the various forms these ideas have taken, how and why they are intrinsically related to one another, and how they have evolved in the present. If you're interested in understanding more about our current world and how it came to be, this class will build a strong foundation for engaging in historically informed critical dialogue on today's pressing social issues. Cross-list: JWST 130.RELI 142 - THE COLORS OF LIFE AND THE END OF LIFE*Short Title: THE COLORS OF LIFEDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: LectureDistribution Group: Distribution Group ICredit Hours: 3Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-LevelDescription: This course explores lived experience through emotion and color, both in life and at the end of life. RELI 224 - RACE AND RELIGIONShort Title: RACE AND RELIGIONDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: LectureDistribution Group: Distribution Group ICredit Hours: 3Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-LevelDescription: There is no shortage of critical engagement with the idea of race and its role in shaping modern history and politics. Rarely, however, do we think about religion as an important part of that story. Economics, public policy, history, literature, and science have all developed various perspectives on this question, but religion is often left aside in these conversations. This course looks closely at the intersection of race and religion and the ways these two ideas have been deeply entangled in the modern and even ancient worlds. We will ask whether it makes sense to talk about race in antiquity and the Middle Ages, prior to its scientific invention; we will explore the links between race and Christianity; and we will interrogate how various groups, including Jews, Muslims, and Black people understood themselves within the discourses of race and religion. By examining these two ideas in relation to one another, this course offers a richer understanding of the history and evolution of racial ideas and their continued resonance in the present. Cross-list: JWST 224.RELI 231 - AMERICAN METAPHYSICAL RELIGION*Short Title: AMERICAN METAPHYSICAL RELIGIONDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: LectureCredit Hours: 3Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-LevelDescription: Beginning with a historical survey of the American metaphysical tradition, this course turns to a close study of the Esalen Institute in Big Sur, California, as a unique window into some of the different ways the tradition has appropriated Asian religions, psychological models of the unconscious, and contemporary scientific paradigms. This course provides an introduction into the history, thought, and worship of the major Black denominations. Cross-list: AAAS 270.

RELI 271 - MEDIEVAL POPULAR CHRISTIANITYShort Title: MEDIEVAL POPULAR CHRISTIANITYDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: LectureDistribution Group: Distribution Group ICredit Hours: 3

Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.

Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-Level

Description: For much of the Middle Ages, literacy was a luxury that ordinary people could not afford. How could peasants participate in Christian traditions? Course surveys devotional practices engaged by the laity, including penance, pilgrimage, plays, charms and spells, as well as traditions of lay interaction with dead saints and ghosts. Cross-list: MDEM 271.

RELI 275 - CONTEMPLATIVE ASIA: READING AND EXPERIENCEShort Title: CONTEMPLATIVE ASIADepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: SeminarDistribution Group: Distribution Group ICredit Hours: 3

Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.

Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-Level

Description: Contemplative practices are a central part of Asian life. This course introduces a wide range of contemplative traditions with powerful cultural currency in Asia. We will read and discuss traditional philosophical and narrative texts in which these practices are anchored. We will also engage in simplified forms of their methods for cultivating easeful clear attention and a kind heart. We will also examine a non-traditional perspective on these practices through an introduction to current scientific (neuroscientific) studies of meditation and the emerging discipline of micro-phenomenology. Readings are assigned from highlights from contemplative traditions of India, Tibet, China, Japan and Korea, using mainly primary sources as well as a well regarded textbook on Buddhist or historical and cultural background.

They don't just sell products, they sell purpose. In this interdisciplinary course, we explore how religion and business shape the cultures we live and work in. From Andrew Carnegie's "Gospel of Wealth" to the rituals of tech startups, we investigate how enterprises function as modern meaning-making institutions. The success or failure of any enterprise can often be measured by the clarity and strength of its purpose or mission. These formal statements or general assumptions often govern both the tasks that make up the labor of the initiative and determine the culture of the workplace. More and more these work cultures bleed into the lives of workers themselves and into our broader culture. This class offers the opportunity to study these cultures, both as inevitable parts of any enterprise and as cultural powers that shape the meaning in our society for individuals and groups. Students will engage both as cultural critics and creators, analyzing case studies and crafting their own purpose-driven projects. Weekly sessions include a seminar on the cultural and historical intersections of religion and enterprise, followed by a hands-on workshop focused on developing each student's own mission-aligned vision. This course is designed for students interested in ethical innovation, values-based leadership, and meaningful work. This course leverages the case method, seminar-style discussions, and experiential learning, providing students with a truly immersive experience.

RELI 654 - ARTS OF LIVING AND ETHICAL AGENCYShort Title: ARTS OF LIVINGDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: SeminarCredit Hours: 3Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Graduate level students.Course Level: Graduate

Description: This graduate seminar analyzes the long western tradition of "philosophy as a way of life" and its attention to spiritual exercises. From ancient philosophy and late ancient asceticism to twentieth-and-twenty-first philosophers and scholars of religion, we will interrogate the interconnection between theory and practice, reflection and action, what we know and how we shape ourselves. We will look at how forming a way of life is itself an art – where (1) technical training in philosophical and religious communities includes bodily, affective, and reflective practices which allow for (2) individuals to forge their own dispositions towards acting, feeling, and thinking that challenge social norms.

RELI 655 - THE MYSTICAL LIFE OF ETHICSShort Title: THE MYSTICAL LIFE OF ETHICSDepartment: ReligionGrade Mode: Standard LetterCourse Type: SeminarCredit Hours: 3Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Graduate level students.Course Level: Graduate

Description: This is an advanced seminar, exclusive for graduate students, treating the intersection between the ethics of everyday life and the mystical and political frameworks within which this life unfolds. Ethics has often been understood as “morality” – what is right or wrong to do, following the rules and norms of one’s context. Instead, we will follow Michel Foucault and take up “ethics” as the everyday practices of relation to self and others that allow us to challenge norms and forge new ways of individual and collective life. We will trace the long history of the intersection between ethics as an everyday mystical practice, that connects individuals to their communities and to a sense of something “more” – whether in relation to the cosmos (Plato, Plotinus), to a divinely supported sociality (Gregory of Nyssa, Augustine), to a gender-breaking self-authorization (Marguerite Porete, Mechtild of Madeburg), to queer resistance to social inscription (Foucault, Butler), to Black female self-care as political resistance (Audrey Lorde, Sylvia Wynter), to embodied practices that knit together the social and spiritual (Francisco Varela, Iris Marion Young).
