At the undergraduate level, the Shepherd School of Music offers both professional training and a broad liberal arts curriculum. Degree programs include a BA degree in music and a BMus degree in performance, composition, orchestral conducting, music history, and music theory. Acceptance into a five-year honors program leads to the simultaneous awarding of the BMus and MMus degrees.

At the graduate level, the school offers professional music training for qualified students in the fields of music composition, performance, or research that is supported by lab or performing ensembles. This training includes theory and history seminars. Advanced degree programs include a MMus degree in composition, orchestral conducting, musicology, and performance; a post-master's Artist Diploma (AD) in orchestral conducting and performance; and a DMA degree in composition and selected areas of performance.

Distribution Group: Distribution Group I
Credit Hours: 3
Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.
Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-Level
Description: Modern science, as a privileged domain of knowledge of the world and of ourselves, has profoundly affected almost every aspect of our lives. This class will take a historical perspective on the relationship between science and modernity with a particular focus on music—a topic which has puzzled philosophers for millennia, and one which poses special problems for the modes of knowledge that characterize scientific modernity. Is music a “universal language”? Why does music so powerfully affect our emotions? Why are some sounds pleasing and others are not? Our goal in this class is to explore what scientific approaches to these questions can tell us about the place of science in the modern world—as well as how and why science has become so important to our imagining of ourselves as thinking, feeling, and willing beings. Armed with this historical knowledge, we will also read recent examples of popular science writing on sound and music a way to think about how we can we become better consumers of scientific knowledge as it is disseminated in the public sphere. Graduate/Undergraduate Equivalency: MUSI 530.

Description: Discussion course examines artistic representations of monsters and bards: cultural icons that have figured prominently in historic documents, film and television, opera, ballet, art, literature, and games. Tracing the development of these concepts from the Middle Ages to the modern day, the course explores ways in which music affects perceptions of monsters and bards, complicating their place in the worlds they inhabit, real and imagined. Topics include approaches to violence, crusading, barbarians, otherness, macabre and gothic aesthetics, orientalism, colonialism, romantic love, chivalry, and religious spirituality.

MUSI 225 - RIFFS, REBELLION, AND REVOLUTION: THE HISTORY OF ROCK
Short Title: HISTORY OF ROCK
Department: Music
Grade Mode: Standard Letter
Course Type: Lecture
Distribution Group: Distribution Group I
Credit Hours: 3
Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-Level
Description: Since its inception in the 1950s, rock & roll has been one of the most popular, influential, and controversial musical styles. Emerging from earlier African American musical traditions, it has since evolved into a diverse and powerful force that has continuously challenged societal norms, pushed musical boundaries, and reflected the rebellious spirit of multiple generations. This course offers a comprehensive survey of rock music, tracing its roots and exploring its diverse offshoots, including psychedelic rock, classic rock, progressive rock, punk, heavy metal, grunge, alternative, indie, and more. Alongside detailed examinations of rock's stylistic and practical elements, this course will engage with broader cultural and historical questions, such as rock's role in social change, its impact on youth culture, and its responses to technological innovations in music production and distribution.

MUSI 226 - MUSIC IN GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE: HISTORIES, CULTURES, AND EXCHANGES
Short Title: MUSIC IN GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE
Department: Music
Grade Mode: Standard Letter
Course Type: Lecture
Distribution Group: Distribution Group I
Credit Hours: 3
Restrictions: Enrollment is limited to Undergraduate, Undergraduate Professional or Visiting Undergraduate level students.
Course Level: Undergraduate Lower-Level
Description: This course will introduce students to the diversity of musical traditions around the world, focusing on both traditional and popular music styles from Africa, Asia, Europe, and the Americas. Students will also be exposed to new ways for thinking about music, not only as a form of art, but also as a dynamic component of global history and cultural exchange that leads to new, hybrid formations. By examining how music reflects and shapes societal changes, students will better understand the interconnectedness of music and its environment. In addition to exploring musical traditions, students will be introduced to the methodologies of ethnomusicological research—the study of music in its cultural and social contexts. Ethnomusicology emphasizes the role of music within human life, examining how music functions in ritual, identity, politics, and community. Students will develop their critical listening skills and learn how to analyze and contextualize the music they hear within diverse cultural frameworks, gaining insights into how music both reflects and transforms cultural identity across the globe.

Department: Music
Grade Mode: Standard Letter
Course Type: Lecture
Distribution Group: Distribution Group I
Credit Hours: 3
Course Level: Undergraduate Upper-Level
Description: This course addresses the facets of diversity and inclusion in the realm of classical music. Each segment of the curriculum is dedicated to an examination of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI), encompassing dimensions such as ethnicity, gender, and socioeconomic status. The methodology is analytical, supported by theoretical underpinnings, and illustrated with pertinent case studies. Key theoretical frameworks such as social constructionism, intersectional feminism, and the capability approach will be addressed. Through a series of case studies, students will examine pieces of music by marginalized composers, and films and scholarly works highlighting DEI issues. In addition, they will analyze policies and institutional approaches that have either hindered or fostered diversity and inclusion within the field. Additionally, the course offers opportunities for students to interact with guest scholars, accomplished musicians, and artists from the local community who work on promoting DEI initiatives. The objective of this course is to empower students with the necessary skills to analyze diversity and inclusion issues through the lens of art and music.
